AMERICAN DUCHESS LEAVES HER HUSBAND

MARLBOROUGH BREAK-UP

LORD IVOR SPENCER CHURCHILL

THE MARQUIS OF BLANDFORD

THE DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH

THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH

Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and Their Children.

Consuelo Reported to Be Jealous of Protege to Whom Duke Has Become Attentive. Separation Reported to Be Permanent and Quarrel Irreconcilable.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The social whirl of London is agitated to-day over what purports to be authentic information that a legal separation has been agreed upon between the Duke and the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt.

Hinted at for some time, the rupture between the beautiful American wife of the Duke and himself is openly discussed, and the reason for the trouble is one of the most appetizing morsels of the society gossips.

DUKE SMILES ON ANOTHER?

One of the newspapers here has published what it believes to be the facts without giving the names of those interested. This newspaper declares that a young girl—a protege of the duchess—is the cause of the alleged break between Consuelo and her husband.

In connection with this international marriage and consequent domestic infelicity, the recent case of Count and Countess Castellane is being recalled and discussed in detail. The Countess was Miss Anna Gould of New York. The Countess and the Duchess are members of two of the richest families of America.

It is asserted in circles where those move who ought to know that all hope of reconciliation between the Duke and the Duchess is abandoned. It is even asserted that a legal separation has already been arranged.

Nothing can be gotten from any of those who are directly connected with the case. That there is foundation for the reports that are being wafted about, no one can be found who is in a position to deny.

DUCHESS NOW IN LONDON.

The duchess to-day is in London, having spent Sunday at Sunderland House. The Duke is still at Blenheim Palace, where he went Friday.

Reynolds's newspaper prints the following:

"London society is agog at a report which is now public property, that one of the best known peers, who married an American millionairess, has entered formally into a mutual agreement with his wife for a separation.

"It has been common talk for the last year or two that things have not been going smoothly with the noble lord. He succeeded to a great name and one of the notable mansions of England, but his mortgages left him little pocket money. His marriage took place with great display in America.

Fair Guest in England.

"The cause of the disagreement appears to be as follows: The sympathy of his wife was evoked in behalf of a charming young lady on the continent who was the victim of severe domestic trouble. After a few months' acquaintance the wife invited her to England and she became on intimate terms with the family.

"It was subsequently noticed that the young peer was paying the visitor more attention than was necessary. Subsequent developments may be left to the imagination.

PEACE TRIED, BUT FAILS.

"The father-in-law of the peer has been here to amicably arrange matters, but failed in the attempt."

The foregoing refers to the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough. The Duchess of Marlborough was at Sunderland House, her London town house, yesterday, but declined to see callers. Her maid said that the Duchess was too ill to receive callers.

The Duke of Marlborough went to Blenheim Palace Friday to spend the week end, as is his usual custom.

While the Duchess was recently in Paris visiting her father, William K. Vanderbilt, the Duke was in Scotland salmon fishing.

Members of the household at Sunderland House denied the report of the separation."

MAY ORDER OUT 5,000 IN CAR MEN'S STRIKE

SPRINGFIELD TO START SYMPATHETIC MOVE; LEADER SAYS OTHERS WILL FOLLOW.

In his effort to secure for the 200 striking car workers of the Boston & Albany railroad at Allston an advance of 15 per cent. in wages and the abolition of piece work, President William G. Johnson of the Allston local union to-day said that if the demands were not granted by the end of this week 5,000 Boston & Albany workers in Massachusetts and New York will be ordered out on strike. President Johnson declares that 300 car workers at Springfield will go out to-night in sympathy with the Allston strikers. International President Patrick F. Richardson of the International Association of Car Workers is there to-day for the purpose of ordering the men to quit work.

That move failing to convince the railway officials, President Johnson says that the 700 car workers in the big shops of the road at West Albany, N. Y., will next lay down their tools. Then the 3,800 members of affiliated carpenters, mechanics and woodworkers are to be asked to join the strike.

Strikers at Mass Meeting.

"There is no strike. On last Thursday we closed the shops down for good," is all that Master Mechanic A. J. Friese of the railroad company will say.

To-day the car shops in Allston are open and six men are there, but no work is being done. The 200 striking car workers held a mass meeting in Harvard Hall, in Franklin street, Allston, to-day, and voted to fight the railroad to a finish. They voted to interest the other local unions in their struggle and to call out all affiliated organizations if their demands were not granted.

To a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN President Johnson said to-day:

"The 200 members of Local No. 115, International Association of Car Workers, struck last Thursday night because their demands for a raise of 15 per cent. in wages and the abolition of piece work were not considered by the officials of the Boston & Albany railroad.

Waited on Foreman.

"On last Tuesday I waited upon the central foreman, John Ford, and laid our demands before him. He said he had no power in the matter and that Master Mechanic Friese would have to be consulted. We could get no satisfaction from any official of the road.

"On Thursday the grievance committee, composed of James Kelly, Frank Barlow, William Lowe, William Price, H. E. Wilson and myself, waited upon Master Mechanic Friese. He would not discuss the matter with us, and at 4:30 o'clock that afternoon we walked out of the shops.

"Our men cannot make even fair wages at piece work. It seems that the better the man and the more thorough his work the poorer his compensation if he has to depend upon piece work.

Locked Out, Says Road.

From the standpoint of the railway company the Allston car workers are locked out. Vice-President Van Etten to-day said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"The situation is just this: a committee representing the ninety-four men employed in the Allston shops waited upon me last Thursday and asked to have the piece work plan abolished and to have their wages raised by fifteen per cent. They also demanded the right to post union notices in the workrooms. They said that they would expect an answer on Saturday and they left. Then I closed the shops."

BOGUS HARVARD STUDENTS HELD FOR $32 THEFT

Judge Scores Flashy Youths for Imitating Worst College Element.

Two young fellows in flaring hosiery and noisy hatbands listened to a lecture from Judge Almy in the Cambridge District Court to-day, and were held in $1,000 bail each for examination. They were charged with larceny. They said they were not guilty.

The young men were William J. Teevans, twenty years old, of Gibson street, and Thomas S. Holmes, twenty-two years, of Foster street, both of Cambridge.

The police alleged that the young men stole $32 from Jennie Christopher of Providence. The police charged that the young men passed themselves off as Hardvard students.

In holding the men for examination Judge Almy said:

"It is one of the most contemptible things for a man to represent himself to be something that he is not, especially when that something is really worse than he is. These young men attempted to imitate the worst quality among the Harvard students: the sporting tendency among a certain portion of them. It would be more commendable if they had attempted to emulate some of the better qualities of the students."

WIFE STANDS BY BURTON ON WAY TO PRISON

Accompanies U. S. Senator to Ironton, Missouri, and Will Live Near Jail.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 22.—Joseph Ralph Burton, former United States Senator from Kansas, arrived here to-day to surrender to United States Marshal Morsey and go to Ironton, Mo., to begin his six months' sentence.

Burton was accompanied by his wife and a little niece who will remain at Ironton until his sentence has expired.

"I never was so proud of Mr. Burton in all my life as I am right now," said Mrs. Burton as she laid one hand on her husband's shoulder. Burton refused to discuss his case from any standpoint. He did not appear nervous. He looks ten years younger than he did during his last trial.

When Mr. and Mrs. Burton and their adopted daughter entered the car en route here, Governor Hoch and another politician were occupying chairs at one of the small tables. Burton and the Governor shook hands. Mrs. Burton followed and the Governor arose from his chair and offered his hand.

"No, Mr. Hoch," says Mrs. Burton removing her hand from the proximity of the Governor's, "I will not shake hands with you. You were not our friend when you could have helped us and I refuse to have anything to do with you now."

CROWD SEES MAN TRY SUICIDE ON COMMON

John Erickson of No. 36 Cottage street, Lynn, shot himself through the head while sitting on a bench on Boston Common at 11:05 a. m. to-day and was removed to the Relief Hospital, where his death is momentarily expected.

Several hundred persons who were passing along Beacon street and in and out of the Common through the Joy street entrance near which Erickson sat when he shot himself saw the man draw the revolver from his pocket and fire the bullet through his brain. The bench is in full view of a number of fine Beacon street residences and the Somerset Club.

Erickson was about thirty-six years old and he had been drinking. No reason is known for the attempt at self-destruction.

A number of men who come every morning to the Common and sit along the Beacon street benches in the sun to read the papers told the police that they saw Erickson come from Joy street, apparently from the West End. For several hours he sat on the bench. His hat was pulled down over his eyes, and he stared down at the ground.

The drawing of the revolver from his pocket and the firing took such a short space of time that none of the watchers had time to stop the man's attempt to kill himself. When the onlookers reached the bench the man had toppled over. He was dying.

The shooting drew a great crowd of people from all over the Common. Members from the Beacon street clubs mingled with working people and women shoppers in a frantic effort to find out what had happened. The police kept the great crowd back until the Relief Hospital ambulance came along and the man was taken away.

The police in Lynn were notified, and an officer sent out from the Lynn police station in an effort to find the man's relatives.

Erickson secured work two weeks ago with the General Electric Company, Lynn. He had lived in Ipswich for the past year, and his household goods are still there. With his wife and eleven-year-old boy he has been living with his sister, Mrs. Oscar Lawson, at No. 36 Cottage street, Lynn.

Mrs. Erickson started at 7 a. m. to-day for Ipswich, where she intended to arrange for moving to Lynn. Shortly after his wife started away Erickson left the house.

"I am going to Boston to see a doctor," he told his sister. "Tell Hilda (his wife) good-by for me."

Mrs. Lawson said to-day that her brother has been acting strangely of late, due to excessive drinking.

WEST FAST IN BLIZZARD'S GRIP; WORST IN 20 YEARS

TWO-FOOT SNOWFALL IN DENVER; STORM COVERS KANSAS, WYOMING AND NEW MEXICO.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 22.—The entire Western country is in the grip of a blizzard almost unprecedented for its severity at this season of the year.

In Colorado snow has been falling continuously for over twenty-four hours, and in most sections of the State there is no sign of a let-up. In some places in the hills two feet of snow has fallen. There are hundreds of tons of sugar beets and thousands of barrels of apples still in the open in the Northern part of the State, and should the cold continue the damage will be very great to the ranchers.

Livestock in Colorado is not suffering much as yet, although in New Mexico and Wyoming, where the temperature is much lower than in Colorado, the suffering is great.

The storm in New Mexico is the worst that has swept that section at this season of the year since 1882.

Trains Delayed.

This morning the thermometers throughout the State registered from 5 to 10 degrees below freezing. Railway schedules are disarranged. All trains are late, though most of the lines are being kept open through the use of rotary snowplows. Both the telegraph and telephone company had trouble with their circuits. A report from Ouray, Col., states that the heaviest snowstorm in years has struck that section.

The snow is from eighteen to twenty inches deep in the city, and in the hills there is from twenty-four to thirty inches. It is still snowing.

At midnight five inches of snow had fallen in Colorado Springs and reports from the south slope of Pike's Peak state that twenty inches had fallen at that hour. The thermometer registered 18 above zero at that point.

Crops Badly Damaged.

From Canon City, Colorado, comes the report that fruit is in great danger. Fully sixty per cent of the Winter apples are still on the trees. This means 250,000 boxes are yet to be gathered, and should the cold continue the danger of freezing the unpicked crop would be great.

To-day the trees and their fruit are covered with snow.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 22.—The worst storm in years for the season prevails in Wyoming. It is accompanied by heavy snow and in some sections high wind. The Union Pacific Railroad has snowplows out on the entire line between here and Ogden. West of Green River, Wyo., the line is blockaded and all communication is cut off.

FIERCE SNOWSTORM IN WESTERN KANSAS DELAYS ALL TRAINS

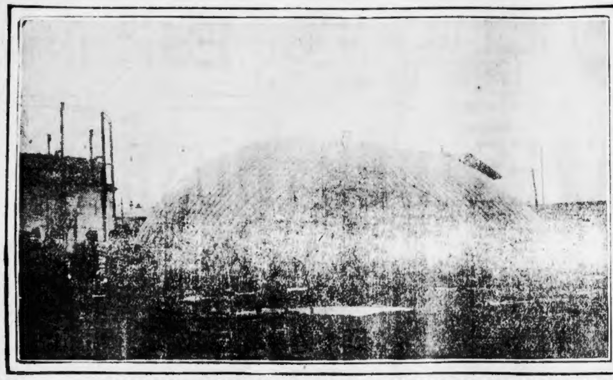

ELLIS, Kan., Oct. 22.—Colorado's snowstorm is passing east and prevailed to-day in Western Kansas. Passengers reaching here this morning on belated east-bound trains report a heavy snowstorm in progress between Ellis and Denver, at some points assuming the proportions of a blizzard, with from four inches to a foot of snow on the ground.

MILLION FOR MISSIONS.

The American Unitarian Association wants to raise $1,000,000 for missions, the plan being to have the churches contribute $200,000 annually for five years.

STRAW VOTE SHOWS GREAT HEARST GAIN

Poll of Printers in Buffalo Offices Gives Hughes But Six Out of 142.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 22.—A straw vote taken of the printers in five of the daily newspapers of Buffalo shows that out of 142 union men, only six will vote for Hughes for Governor, the remaining 136 being for Hearst. Two years ago thirty-two of the 136 men voted for Higgins, the Republican candidate for Governor. They are now enthusiastically for Hearst.

Here is the vote as carefully taken in each of the newspaper offices:

Paper.	Hearst.	Hughes.
Courier (Democratic)	37	0
Enquirer (Democratic)	23	0
News (Republican)	28	1

FIGHT DRAPER AND BUTTRICK IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Oct. 22.—Deciding to fight to a finish against Governor Guild, Lieutenant-Governor Draper and Senator Buttrick, the members of the Wage Earners' Club of Worcester are to-day arranging for a series of mass meetings in Worcester, Clinton and other surrounding towns.

At a meeting which was held yesterday in Electrical Workers' Hall, No. 419 Main street, such enthusiasm prevailed as has never been exceeded in any gathering in years. The hall was packed, and many prominent labor leaders were present. The following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That we condemn the candidacy of Senator Allen G. Buttrick of Lancaster, and indorse that of James F. McGovern as State Senator from the Second Worcester District. It is further

"Resolved, That we condemn the candidacy of Eben S. Draper for Lieutenant-Governor and indorse E. Gerry Brown of Brockton as a staunch friend of organized labor, and that we pledge ourselves to bring about his election by every fair and honorable means."

These resolutions and an indorsement of John B. Moran for Governor acted like an electric spark, and the enthusiasm blazed up in a flash. Many addresses were made and plans laid for an active and systematic waging of the political campaign to its close.

MACHINE SENDS OUT A DESPERATE APPEAL FOR GUILD

A piteous appeal has gone out from the Republican State Headquarters to make things sure for Governor Guild, and the request is not meeting with enthusiasm.

"If you can't vote for Guild, don't vote for Moran," is the way the matter is being put up to the various Republican town and city committees.

An instance of the desperate condition is the possibility of towns and cities losing representation in the different conventions. The appeal says: "If you don't get out a big vote for Guild you will lose representation in the conventions. The more votes you get for Guild, the more delegates you get for your town."

JUDGE OUSTS BOTH M'ALEERS

Bary E. McAleer and John B. McAleer, who had filed counter petitions in the Probate Court for the removal of each other as executors, were both removed to-day by Judge Grant as executors of the estate of their father, Patrick McAleer, the millionaire builder and real estate owner of Boston. In their respective petitions Miss McAleer and her brother charged unfitness of the other.

The remaining children, Charles L., John A., Leo F., Annie T., Sarah J. and Helena C. McAleer, were in the court room when Judge Grant removed the executors, and notified the lawyers for both sides to have their clients agree upon trustees to be appointed by the court. The four brothers and four sisters, who have been at odds over the disposition of the estate since their father's death, sat on opposite sides of the court room.

COAL TRUST CASE IS TO BE REOPENED

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION READY TO ACT ON HEARST CHARGE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22.—The famous case of Hearst against the anthracite railroad and coal companies, charging violation of the Sherman law and of the interstate commerce law, will probably be reopened by order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in order that more testimony may be taken and the case decided under the new rate law.

This statement comes direct from the Interstate Commerce Commission, and in railroad and financial circles is expected to cause something of a sensation. It is thought by those familiar with the testimony that developed in the earlier hearings to presage a decision, under the new law, that will smash the anthracite trust.

Can Act Under New Law.

More than this, it indicates the disposition of the Interstate Commerce Commission to make the most of the opportunity afforded by the new law. Under the old Interstate Commerce act, even if the charges made by Hearst had been found true, the commission would have had no power beyond making an order to the companies to cease and to desist from objectionable practices. It could not have prescribed the practices they must follow.

But under the new law this is different. The commission has power not only to order that former practices cease or old rates be cancelled, but to specify the new practices or rules that must be substituted and the new rates that must be charged. The difference is simply the difference between an ineffectual and an effectual outcome of the proceeding.

Conspiracy in Restraint of Trade.

Congressman Hearst in his petition filed with the commission charged that the ownership and contractual relations among the anthracite roads and mining companies was such that there was created a conspiracy in restraint of trade which controlled the rate on coal from the anthracite field to the seaboard, and even dominated the price of coal in the markets; that this was in contravention of both the Sherman law and the Interstate Commerce law, and he prayed for relief.

A great volume of testimony was taken by the commission, which brought out a remarkable condition in the anthracite industry. At a certain point in the inquiry the attorneys for Mr. Hearst and the commission demanded a certain contract which was supposed to have an important bearing on the case. The defendants refused to produce it on the ground that the commission had no authority to require such a private paper to be produced.

AUTOS RACE BALLOONS IN WESTWARD FLIGHT

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSFIELD, Oct. 22.—In one of the prettiest starts ever made from the Aero Club grounds, the huge balloons Centaur and Eagle began their race to-day, cheered by a great crowd of society people from Lenox.

The Centaur, carrying the American colors, got away at 10:21.

Charles T. Walsh was the pilot. In the car with him were Major Samuel Reber, U. S. A., and Captain Charles F. Chandler, U. S. A., both connected with the signal corps, who were sent by the War Department to make observations.

Thirty seconds after the Centaur rose the Eagle slipped upward. Leo Stevens acted as pilot. His companion was Captain Homer W. Hedge, president of the Aero Club of America.

The start was almost due west, and the wind was blowing ten miles an hour.

Jockeying for Currents.

When the balloons reached an altitude of five hundred feet both aeronauts began jockeying for stronger air currents. The Centaur immediately let go a large quantity of ballast, and rose far above the Eagle. In this position both envelopes seemed to be moving very rapidly.

Stevens, in the Eagle, held his position three hundred feet below the Centaur, as the bags passed over the Taghonic range to the west and into New York State. Although there was no race scheduled between the balloons and automobiles, several cars started to follow the racers.

In one was Cortlandt Field Bishop, chairman of the racing committee of the Aero Club of America, with Highway Commissioner John H. Manning, also Henry H. Pease, a New York millionaire, with Mrs. Pease and Miss Emily Grugan. Floyd Knight and William Archibold of Pittsfield and several others started by the State road over into New York, keeping pace with the balloons.

One of the amusing things about the race is that the Lenox Selectmen had special officers posted all along the highways, but the wind drove the balloons across Pittsfield and Hancock and the Lenox officials had all their trouble for nothing.

The Centaur carried the American flag in its netting because of the presence of the two army officers.

Have Rations for 24 Hours.

Major Reber carried along maps and a stethoscope barometer and thermometer for government use. The Centaur also has rations sufficient for twenty-four hours. Captain Hedge said just before starting they hoped to make at least 300 miles and surpass the record of the German pursuit cup race. The race for the cup offered by Major Alan R. Hawley of the Aero Club will probably take place from here on Wednesday of this week in the Centaur.

In passing over Potter Mountain, west of Pittsfield, the two balloons were in the clouds. At 11:10 o'clock the two were passing over Stephentown, N. Y., bound for Troy, at a height of about 500 feet.

Just as the balloons left Aero Park the Pittsfield fire whistle was blown, and all towns in Berkshire County were notified by telephone and thousands of people watched for the airships.

Arrangements were made if the balloons kept sufficiently near each other they would signal by the Morse code.

FEAR FOR ITALIAN NOBLEWOMEN, LOST IN BALLOON FLIGHT

Special Cable to Boston American.

MILAN, Oct. 22.—Nothing has yet been heard to-day of the Duchess d'Aosta, who, with the Baron and Baronesse di Sammartino and Lieutenant Ciametti, made a balloon ascension from this city yesterday.

Although they were followed by an automobile, no trace has been found of either and the balloon when last seen was very far up among the clouds travelling at great speed before a strong wind.

Relatives and friends of the daring Duchess and Baroness are becoming worried and grave fear is already entertained among members of the nobility. It has now been more than twenty-four hours since the ascension was made.

CHARGE NURSE WITH ATTACK ON TWO GIRLS

Miller, Held in Case of Miss Joy, Also Accused as Miss Driver's Assailant.

James Miller, the trained nurse arrested in connection with the attack on Miss Martha Joy, the pretty stenographer, of No. 106 Milton avenue, who was beaten on Friday night and who is yet in a dangerous condition, was before Judge Joseph R. Churchill of the Dorchester Municipal Court to-day on two charges of assault and battery.

Early to-day Sergeant Arnold and Patrolman Rodgers swore out warrants charging assault and battery on Miss Joy and another on Miss Elizabeth Driver of No. 93 Armadine street, the latter alleged to have occurred September 29. To both charges Miller returned pleas of not guilty and he was held in $300 bail on the first and $100 on the latter charge for a further hearing on next Monday.

Miss Joy, who is still dangerously ill as the result of her beating, was not able to appear in court to declare whether Miller was the man who had attacked her, and for that reason the case went over. Miss Elizabeth Driver, who has declared that she believes Miller is the man who attacked her, was in court. Attorney Michael J. Creed of South Boston appeared for Miller.

Miller, or Millet, as he is called by some persons who know him, denies positively that he is the man wanted. Mrs. John A. Boston, at whose home Miller has been employed, has declared that he was in her house at the time Martha Joy screamed for help.

MANSFIELD AND DREW HUSTLING

Public interest is at the highest pitch and the attention of the voters in Wards 9, 12 and 17 is centred upon the candidates for the Senate and the House of Representatives from those wards. John J. Mansfield, Independent Democrat, is the candidate for the Senate and Michael S. Drew, also running as an Independent Democrat, is the candidate for the House in Ward 17.

Both these candidates have the indorsement of the Independence League. Great enthusiasm is already manifested in favor of the two men and a large attendance is certain at the rallies scheduled during the week. Following is their schedule:

Monday, 8 p. m., Jefferson Hall, Dover and Albany streets, Ward 9.

Wednesday, 8 p. m., Lincoln Street Hall, Ward 12.

Friday, 8 p. m., Odd Fellows' Hall, Hampden street, Ward 17.

PIPES AND FLUTES FOR NEW IRISH CLUB

$2,000 GEM ROBBERY IN HUNNEWELL HOME

BELIEVED THIEVES ESCAPED FROM WELLESLEY ESTATE BY BOAT.

Burglars who entered the home of Mrs. Arthur H. Hunnewell at Wellesley and stole a lot of valuable jewelry, it is believed from an investigation of the case to-day, reached the estate in a boat by way of the Charles River, and made their escape in the same manner.

The jewels stolen, said to be valued at mor than $2,000, were the property of Mrs. Hunnewell's daughter, Mrs. George W. Blake, whose husband to-day went to police headquarters in Boston, gave a list of the articles taken, and asked for help to run down the daring thieves.

To corroborate the theory that the thieves used a boat one was found to-day on the opposite side of the river from the Hunnewell home, on the estate of Miss Alice S. Cheney. It is believed that this is the boat that the burglars had.

Deputy Chief Neal of the State Police, after looking over the residence to-day, gave it as his opinion that the robbery was either done by some one who at one time had been attached to the house, or else by experts who had been "tipped off" as to the exact situation there regarding the rooms where they might look for the most valuable booty.

Mrs. Hunnewell Tells Story.

The story of the robbery was told by Mrs. Hunnewell, who is a widow, to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I am convinced that the burglars reached the house by means of a boat, coming up the Charles, and returning in the same way. It may have been a motor boat or it may have been simply a row boat. The report that the thieves came in an automobile probably arose from the fact that an auto was standing in front of the house when the act was committed. It belonged to a friend who was at the house at the time.

"The robbery was committed between 7:20 and 7:30 yesterday evening. The valuables belonged to my daughter, Mrs. George B. Blake. After the thieves came up the river in a boat they came through the estate and along by the green hedge, I believe, and came to the northwest corner of the house.

Worked Very Quickly.

"It would be comparatively easy to reach the roof of the veranda at that point. They climbed up and entered my room first. Nothing was disturbed there. They crossed the hall and entered the room occupied by my daughter.

"They must have acted very quickly and quietly because there were several people in the house at the time. No one heard anything suspicious. They did not take all of the valuable there, leaving many things in their hurry."

Several diamond rings and pins and an expensive necklace are among the articles reported missing. Mrs. Hunnewell was unable to give the police last night a full list of what was stolen, and it is probable that more was taken. The valuation was placed at $1,000, but this is said to be less than half the real amount, as some of the articles cannot be duplicated.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake left their home about 7 o'clock to take a short drive. On her bureau Mrs. Blake had left several pieces of jewelry, among the collection being some rings, gold pins and a diamond necklace. The latter is worth nearly $1,000.

Shortly after their departure from the estate they were passed by a large automobile containing two men. The incident was insignificant, and when later the servants heard the sounds of an auto passing back and forth in front of the house their suspicion was not aroused. Several saw the auto, and later they saw it stop in a shady spot down the road. The two men got out.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake returned after their drive and in a short time she went to her room. Upon entering it she saw that it had been ransacked, and the manner in which things were littered about the place showed that the thieves had done their work in haste.

Diamonds Were Missing.

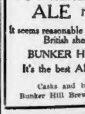

Going to the bureau where she had left the most of her jewels, she could not find them. Not waiting to search, she sent for her husband and the servants.

Mr. Blake saw at once that the robbers had entered by way of a window over the porch, and the marks of their jimmy were plain upon the sill. Mrs. Blake immediately thought of the two men in the automobile and told her husband.

The Wellesley police were at once notified, but although little time had elapsed no trace could be found of the auto. Word was then sent to the Boston police, with a request to search for the men.

Mrs. Elizabeth N. Andrews Says Husband Was Infatuated With Another.

Two clergymen and a clergyman's wife were the only witnesses in a divorce suit tried and decided to-day by Judge White in the Suffolk County Divorce Court.

Mrs. Elizabeth N. Andrews, late of Lynn, was the clergyman's wife. She prayed for a decree from her husband, Rev. Neil Andrews, on the ground of disloyalty. Married in Providence, September 23, 1893, they went to live first at Shelborne Falls, and afterward to Lynn. In each of these cities Rev. Mr. Andrews was pastor of a Baptist church.

"While we were living in Lynn," testified Mrs. Andrews, "my husband became infatuated with a woman, and his conduct was such that he was dismissed from the church, and I left him. That was in June, 1895."

Rev. William H. Eaton, secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society and State Superintendent of Baptist Missionaries, went on the witness stand and testified that he had been acquainted by the officials of the East Baptist Church in Lynn with the details of Rev. Mr. Andrews's conduct, which he characterized as "disgraceful."

Rev. Tammen D. Johnson, pastor of the Dorchester Temple, also testified that the infatuation of Andrews for the Lynn woman, whose name was not mentioned, had been brought to his attention officially by the deacons of the church.

For the first time since the opening of the present term of the Divorce Court Judge White ordered Rev. Mr. Andrews's name "called." There was no answer, and Mrs. Andrews got her decree.

Success In the Gulf Coast Country

Every Monday and Thursday there will appear in the columns of this paper an example of what has been done in farming in the Gulf Coast Country on the Brownsville Line. 12

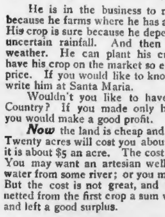

$2,500 Realized from Ten Acres of Cucumbers.

Mr. E. B. McNeil has tried raising tender vegetables near Santa Maria in the Gulf Coast Country. He planted ten acres of cucumbers and marketed the crop early last Spring. The yield was 200 bushels to the acre, and for the entire crop he received $2,500.

He is in the business to make money, and he does it because he farms where he has a sure crop and an early crop. His crop is sure because he depends on irrigation and not on uncertain rainfall. He can plant his cucumbers in the Winter and have his crop on the market so early that he gets the highest price. If you would like to know more about his experiences write him at Santa Maria.

Wouldn't you like to have a farm in this Gulf Coast Country? If you made only half as much as Mr. McNeil you would make a good profit.

Now the land is cheap and you can get it on easy terms. Twenty acres will cost you about $500. The cost of clearing it is about $5 an acre. The cost of water for irrigation varies. You may want an artesian well of your own; you may get water from some river; or you may get it from your neighbor. But the cost is not great, and those who have tried it have netted from the first crop a sum which has paid all expenses and left a good surplus.

The Winter Vegetable Garden of America

Take a trip down there and see for yourself—that's the best way. Every first and third Tuesday of each month, we will sell round-trip tickets to any point in the Gulf Coast Country and return, at the following rates:

From Chicago, - - $25.00
From St. Louis, - - 20.00
From Kansas City, - 20.00
From Peoria, - - - 23.00
From St. Paul, - - 27.50
From Minneapolis, - - 27.50

These tickets will be good 30 days and they will permit you to stop over at any point.

Let me send you our books describing the wonderful crops produced in this marvelous country. Don't delay, write me to-day.

DR. THORNDIKE SAYS STEINERT SOUND IN MIND

Testifies in $100,000 Will Contest in Favor of the Deceased.

NO EVIDENCE OF DISORDER

Dr. Paul Thorndike of Marlboro street, who attended William Steinert a short time before the latter's death, was the principal witness to-day in the continued hearing in the Probate Court before Judge Grant in the will contest by which Morris Steinert of New Haven, father of William, seeks to break the will. The sum of $100,000 is involved.

Dr. Thorndike told of treating William Steinert for a skin disease which he believed caused Steinert to be irritable and excited.

Dr. Thorndike was asked what he thought of the mental condition of William Steinert on September 20, ten days before the will was executed.

"He was perfectly sound," said Dr. Thorndike. "There was no evidence of mental weakness at any time during the treatment I was giving him. He was polite and well mannered and took his turn the same as the other patients when he came to my office. He was not incoherent in speech. Neither was there any evidence of mental disorder in his walk or dress."

Personal Observation.

Asked by Lawyer McClellan on what he based his opinion, Dr. Thorndike said it was on his personal observation.

"Did you ever hear that William Steinert asked a twelve-year-old girl to marry him?" asked the attorney.

"I did not," answered the physician.

"If you had heard that would it change your opinion?" "If I had heard that it might have changed my opinion," admitted the physician.

"Did you ever hear of his ordering a big dinner in Saratoga to which no guests were invited?" "No, I never heard of that."

Might Have Changed Opinion.

"Did you ever hear of his having thrown away an umbrella and then accusing a boy in whose possession he found it of having stolen it?"

"No, I never heard of that."

"Did you ever hear of his having given a dinner to a large number of people and at that dinner publicly proposing marriage to his brother's wife?"

"I never heard of it."

"If you had heard of these things would they change your opinion?"

"Certainly, my opinion might have been changed by such knowledge," Dr. Thorndike answered.

FILE PROTEST AGAINST 'GUIDE' OF LIQUOR MEN

Excise Commission to Give Hearing to Representatives of Bartenders' Union.

The Board of Excise Commissioners gave a reason to-day for the "Bartenders' Guide" that Secretary Louis Epple has begun to compile. To-morrow the board will give a hearing on the guide to a committee from the Bartenders' Union. The committee will make vigorous protest against the compilation.

Protest Is Filed.

Every liquor licensee in town had been asked to furnish the Excise Commissioners with the name, age and address of each and all of his employees, and to state, further, whether the employe in each individual case is bartender, salesman or just helper.

To-day a petition of protest was carried to Pemberton Square by a committee, made up of President John B. O'Brien, Vice-President John J. Quinn, J. J. Gallivan and Agents John J. English and Robert A. Callahan, formerly international president.

The Rogues' Gallery.

"The board has been misunderstood about this thing, and the boys are wrong," Commissioner Baker said to the newspaper men. "The only reason in the world for sending out these blanks was our desire to know the people with whom the Commission is dealing. This 'rogues' gallery' talk must be a joke. The Commission simply wants to familiarize itself with the liquor business and its people."

PICKPOCKET SUSPECT HELD

Positively identified to-day by James E. Gould, a leather merchant at No. 32 Federal street, as one of the men who jostled him in an L train at the North Station on the night of October 8, shortly after which jostling Gould discovered that a $250 diamond stud was missing from his bosom, Henry Courtney, forty-four, now claiming to belong at No. 56 Davis street, Fall River, not only denied the allegation, but declared his ability to prove an alibi. He says he was in Augusta, Me., on the day of the alleged theft.

He was locked up on Gould's complaint of larceny from the person.

MRS. RICHARDS AT REST IN MT. AUBURN

The funeral of the late Mrs. George L. Richards, who died in Paris, September 30, was held this afternoon in the chapel at Mt. Auburn cemetery. Bishop Lawrence conducted the simple service, and there were many relatives and friends and beautiful floral tributes. Among the mourners was J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, who married Miss Elsie Richards, a daughter of the deceased.

REUNION OF SONS OF ERIN SOCIETIES

The County Limerick Club held a reunion yesterday afternoon and last evening in Phoenix Hall, Washington street. Benjamin J. Fitzpatrick, the president of the club, was in general charge of affairs, and several addresses were made by distinguished visitors and guests.

The Tipperary Men's Association held a similar reunion in Hollis Hall last evening.

"GO," SAYS IRATE BARON TO SON AND CAMILLE CLIFFORD, BRIDE

CAMILLE CLIFFORD'S NEWEST AND CATCHIEST PICTURE.

This is the latest photograph of the beautiful actress, who, as the bride of the Hon. Henry Lyndhurst Bruce, is now the talk of England and America, and who, with her husband, was sh own the door by the irate father-in-law, Lord Aberdare.

Lord Aberdare Shows the Door to His Heir and Beautiful Actress Wife.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Lord Henry Campbell Aberdare has shown his only son and heir, the Hon. Henry Lyndhurst Bruce, and his show girl bride the door of Longwood Castle, the country seat of the Aberdares.

This dramatic climax of the wooing and wedding of Camille Clifford, the "Gibson Girl," by the heir to the peerage of Aberdare, came at midnight on Saturday, after a thrilling automobile ride of 100 miles to Longwood Castle, which witnessed two fainting fits by the bride, whose fears told her aright of the reception she would receive.

If the heir to Aberdare had treasured a hope that the relentless opposition which his father had shown to his marriage with Miss Clifford would melt at sight of the bride, it must have fled at the first glance at the angry face of the stern old baron.

Young Aberdare stood his ground. He met his father at the door of the drawing room, and at his side was the white-faced, trembling bride, shrinking from the storm that she foresaw.

"Father, this is my bride. Will you not welcome her to Longwood?" the young man pleaded as he advanced.

Lord Aberdare is said to have stood still, his face paling visibly and twitching, as though he could not control the muscles. Grief and helpless rage comingled were expressed in his look. His lips opened but no sound issued. He paid no attention to his son's outstretched hand. At last he found words.

"You dare to come here to me in this manner?" he said. "You have the effrontery to do this?"

Then he stepped aside, leaving a passage to the door, and pointed to it.

"Go," he said. "Go at once, and take your bride with you. Do not speak. Go."

Without a word, the son is said to have passed the bride's hand through his arm, and, passing his father, left the castle.

DASH THROUGH FIRE TO ESCAPE DEATH

LYNN, Oct. 22.—Caught in a fire trap by a wall of flame which separated their room from the hallway, Daniel J. and Henry J. Owens were obliged last night to run a gauntlet of fire to escape cremation. Wrapped in blankets they dashed to the street. When they discovered that their two sisters and mother were still prisoners both rushed back into the smoke-filled house and guided them to the yard.

MARRIED AGED WOMAN; NOW FIGHTS WILL

Young Physician Clashes With Mrs. Barnes's Nieces In Probate Court.

DR. ANDERSON ON STAND

In the contest over the will of Mrs. Louisa Pierce Barnes before Judge Lawton in the Probate Court of Middlesex County, East Cambridge, to-day, in which the fight for the estate of the dead woman begins between her husband, Dr. Charles H. Barnes, Mrs. Emily Coolidge Abbey and Miss Anna Belle Coolidge, nieces of the dead woman, an echo of the romance in which an aged bride and a youthful bridegroom figured was recalled.

Dr. Barnes claims the estate by a will made six years ago while he and his wife were at Los Angeles, Cal. The nieces, who were both in court to-day, show a will that was made two years ago after Mrs. Barnes had obtained a divorce from her husband.

Creditors Make Claim.

Many creditors of Mrs. Barnes, who are interested in the contest, maintain that the estate was insolvent when she died, and that the $[illegible] which she left to her two nieces in the later will and some small bequests to friends was all owed to them. Mrs. Barnes died at Newton Highlands on July 3, 1906.

Defending the last will is Attorney William M. Morgan, while for the contestant is Attorney Thomas W. Proctor and Attorney William N. Noble, who seek to prove that Mrs. Barnes was of unsound mind when the last will was made.

The greater part of the morning was used up in a wrangle over the admission of Dr. Edward A. Anderson of Newton Centre, an alienist, as a witness. Judge Lawton ruled that the doctor's evidence should be admitted.

Dr. Anderson testified that he attended Mrs. Barnes from May 29, 1904, to the day she died. He found that she was not strong mentally.

Surprise in Newton.

Social circles of Newton were very much surprised six years ago when the announcement was made that Miss Louisa Pierce had been married to Dr. Barnes of Boston. The age of the bride was given as seventy-seven and that of her husband as thirty-two. At that time the value of the property of the woman was estimated at about $50,000.

Dr. Barnes at that time was a student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons on Shawmut avenue. He was admitted to the home of Miss Pierce as a boarder, and in less than a month applied to the clerk at Newton for a license to marry, and got it. As the age of the bride, who was known to the city clerk, was given as forty, it caused him to notify her relatives.

The relatives of the woman traced her to Newburg, N. Y., where it was found that she and Dr. Barnes had been married on May 13, 1900. Barnes returned to the Newton home alone, opened the house and bought an automobile. The aged woman was brought home, and her friends began a divorce proceeding in November, 1902. An absolute divorce was granted in August, 1904.

W.C.T.U. MAKES GIFT OF GAVELS

A pretty and impressive incident of to-day's session of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Tremont Temple was the presentation of gavels to Miss Slack of England, Miss Darling of Scotland and Miss Yajami of Japan. The gavels were tied to one another with a broad white satin ribbon.

The three delegates stood in a group as Miss Anna Gordon told the history of the wood. It was taken from a tree in the garden at Rest cottage, Evanston, Ill., the home of Miss Willard, and the chestnut from which it grew was planted by her own hands.

WEARY OF LIFE, WOMAN FINDS DEATH BY GAS

BROTHER AND SISTER FIND HOUSEKEEPER DEAD ON PANTRY FLOOR.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 22.—Margaret Carboy, twenty-nine, housekeeper for her mill operative brother and sister, gave up the battle last night. She came to the conclusion a day or two ago, when she said that "life is not worth the living."

They found her to-day, the brother and sister, asphyxiated on the floor of the pantry. She had taken every imaginable precaution to guard against discovery and failure. First the exhaust pipe of the pantry sink had been stopped with cloth. Paper had been rolled until it would fit into the crevices about the window. The crack under the door had been similarly treated. Then, turning the gas on, the girl had laid upon the floor, covering her head with a shawl, to die alone.

None can give a cause for the suicide.

Sister Tries to Cheer Her.

At the home of the Carboys, No. 70 Massasoit street, in that eastern section of Fall River that is locally called Flint Village, Margaret Carboy said last Saturday night to Jennie, her sister: "I don't know what there is to this life, after all, Jennie. It seems to me that it's not worth living."

The younger girl, noting with alarm the hard and set look upon her sister's face feigned a light-heartedness and tried to drive the blues away. She was sure then that it must be "the blues." They slept together, the sisters, and again last night the housekeeper, Margaret, talked despondently.

This morning Jennie awoke [illegible] to find herself alone. Alarmed, she hastily searched the house, finding Margaret dead. Then she cried [illegible] and fainted.

Grieves After Wedding.

There was another girl in the Carboy household, a sister, Alice, who, a short time since, married a young man of the name of Leslie and moved away to Nova Scotia. Neighbors cannot say in just what manner this marriage and Margaret's despondency may have been associated, but they do say that the girl now dead had been downhearted and low in spirits ever since her younger sister went away as Mrs. Leslie.

BURGLARS LEFT BEST OF BOOTY

The police of Somerville are to-day searching for thieves who broke into the residence of Frank E. Dickerson, No. 17 Craigie street, early Sunday morning while the family was absent and left behind them a suit case packed with the family silver. Other valuables amounting to $100 were stolen. It is believed that the thieves were frightened away, as they left the best part of their booty. Mr. Dickerson is a Boston attorney with offices at No. 18 Tremont street.

GIVE NOTICE OF TWO NEW YORK FAILURES

Boston stock exchange houses to-day received official notification of the failure in New York of P. T. White on the Petroleum Exchange, and James W. Henning, head of the brokerage firm of J. W. Henning & Co. Both were outside brokers and had no Boston connections, and the failures had no effect on the Boston market.

RECEIVERS TO SELL PROPERTY

Arthur Hardy and William Fagin were to-day appointed receivers for the Swampscott Manufacturing Company by Judge [illegible] in the Superior Court, on petition of the Federal Trust Company of Boston, holder of the company's notes to the amount of $20,000.

The Swampscott Manufacturing Company is a Maine corporation, capitalized at [illegible], whose charter was suspended last year by the Maine Legislature. The company is insolvent and ceased doing business a month ago. The buildings and plant at Swampscott will be disposed of for the benefit of the creditors.

HELD ON CHARGE OF DIAMOND THEFT

Henry Courtney, claiming a residence at Fall River, was held in $500 in the Municipal Court to-day for examination on Thursday on a charge of larceny of a diamond scarfpin from James E. Gould, a business man at No. 32 Federal street. The diamond is worth $250.

DRAPER BRANDED FOE OF LABOR BY THE BOSTON CENTRAL UNION

Resolution Unanimously Adopted at Great Meeting of 500 Delegates.

Work and Votes Against Republican Candidate Enjoined Upon All Affiliated Bodies.

Resolutions condemning Eben S. Draper, Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, as a foe to organized labor were adopted at a big meeting of Boston Central Labor Union Sunday afternoon. Five hundred delegates, representing every labor union and trades organization in Greater Boston, were present, and gave their unanimous endorsement to the resolutions which, as adopted, are as follows:

"Whereas, Eben S. Draper, Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, is again appealing to the voters of Massachusetts for their support; be it

"Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Boston Central Labor Union, condemn him as a consistent enemy to the rights and liberty of trades unionists and workingmen in general, and pledge ourselves to vote against him and use every effort within our power to bring about his defeat; and be it further

"Resolved, That the various locals represented here be informed of this action of the central body and be urged to join in this movement for the welfare of organized labor in Massachusetts."

Draper Bitterly Arraigned.

The resolutions were adopted after several addresses had been listened to, in which scathing arraignment of Draper was made. Secretary-Treasurer D. D. Driscoll of the State branch, A. F. of L., said:

"The officers of the State branch, A. F. of L., will accept an invitation from Eben S. Draper to go through his factory at Hopedale unaccompanied and without being watched and guarantee to produce evidence that wages are not paid there that are paid in other factories in Massachusetts, and that union wages do not obtain there."

Mr. Driscoll made the foregoing statement in his report of the proceedings of the recent convention of the State branch, held at Lawrence, as delegate from the Central Labor Union. After reading the resolutions adopted at the convention, which vigorously condemned Draper as an enemy to organized labor, Mr. Driscoll said:

"The executive council, consisting of the State Branch, were instructed by the convention to formulate a campaign against Eben S. Draper and those Senators who voted against or dodged the Overtime Bill. That campaign has been inaugurated. I have made seven speeches since the convention in the different districts of Senators who assisted in defating the Overtime Bill.

Hilton Dodges Challenge.

"We have challenged Senator Horton H. Hilton of Lowell to meet John Golden of Fall River in a debate. As secretary I sent a registered letter several days ago to Hilton, but although I got a reeipt showing that he received the letter no reply has been received from him to date.

"The vote of that convention will be carried out, and every officer of the State Branch, old and new, no matter what burden may be placed upon his shoulders, will go through the State of Massachusetts calling upon the voters to bring about the defeat of Eben S. Draper and those Senators who voted against or dodged the Overtime Bill. All we ask is that the members of organized labor do their duty.

"No stone will be left unturned to encompass the defeat of Eben S. Draper. We will go to Hopedale, if need be. We will prove by affidavits that men employed in the Hopedale factory are not receiving the union wages received by machinists and iron moulders in other parts of the State."

Mr. Driscoll was applauded repeatedly during his address.

Thomas M. Nolan of Typographical Union No. 13, who followed Mr. Driscoll, said:

"I wish to say that that combination includes Elmer A. Stevens, candidate for the Senate from Somerville, one of the worst enemies of organized labor in this State."

Mr. Nolan stated that the Typographical Union was issuing thousands of circulars containing the names of those members of the General Court who voted against or dodged the overtime bill, and that copies may be secured at the office of the Typographical Union, No. 52 Federal street.

The Central Labor Union voted to donate $10 to the campaign fund of the State branch.

Action Was Unanimous.

The resolution offered by John F. Kennedy, business agent of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, condemning Draper as a foe to organized labor, was unanimously adopted. On a motion to refer the resolution to the Wage Earners' Central Club, Mr. Kennedy declared:

"There are no politics in this resolution. It is simply an attempt to defeat a man who is hostile to organized labor."

Charles E. O'Donnell of the Barbers' Union said:

"The State Branch, A. F. of L., at its recent convention at Lawrence, passed a resolution condemnatory of Draper, and the Boston Central Labor Union should take similar action against this man who makes white slaves of those in his employ. Organized labor should condemn this man every time and everywhere they have an opportunity. It is the duty of every laboring man to vote against him."

Patrick Maloney of the Theatrical Stage Employes' Union, the new vice-president of the Central Labor Union, said:

"I hope this action will be taken against Draper. Draper was condemned by the State Branch and the executive council instructed to go out and fight him. Let us go on record as denouncing this man."

Scathing Denunciation of Draper by Boston Labor Men

Whereas, Eben S. Draper, Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, is again appealing to the voters of Massachusetts; be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Boston Central Labor Union, condemn him as a consistent enemy to the rights and liberties of trades unionists and workingmen in general, and pledge ourselves to vote against him and use every effort within our power to bring about his defeat; and be it further

Resolved, That the various locals represented here be informed of this action of the central body and be urged to join in this movement for the welfare of organized labor in Massachusetts. Resolution unanimously adopted yesterday by the 500 delegates of Boston Central Labor Union.

LABOR NEWS — ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Arthur M. Huddell of Hoisting and Portable Engineers' Union No. 4 was elected president of the Central Labor Union yesterday by a vote of 226 to 92 for Vice-President Peter H. McNeally of Teamsters' Union No. 191, and 89 for John T. Cashman of Painters' Union No. 11.

Patrick Maloney of the Theatrical Stage Employes' Union was chosen vice-president; Henry Abrahams of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 was re-elected secretary for the twenty-fifth term; Philip H. Sweet of Coopers' Union No. 89 was re-elected financial secretary-treasurer; John J. Fenton of Coal Teamsters' Union No. 68 was re-elected sergeant-at-arms for the thirtieth time; Charles Roeder of the Goldbeaters' Union was chosen to fill the vacancy in the assistant secretaryship.

J. E. Eaton of Dorchester Carpenters' Union, John F. Kennedy of Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17 and George F. Tagen of Piano and Furniture Movers' Union were elected trustees, and Miss Anna T. Bowen of Cigar and Tobacco Strippers' Union, P. H. Daley of Carriage and Cab Drivers and Dennis D. Driscoll of the Horseshoers were re-elected auditors.

Resolutions condemning Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper as opposed to labor's interests were unanimously adopted. Resolutions condemning the Senators who voted against the "overtime" bill and other candidates for public office were referred to the Wage Earners' clubs without action by recommendation of the resolutions committee.

WILL PRESENT SCALE.

Painters' District Council of Eastern Massachusetts at its meeting yesterday received the referendum vote of the local unions of the district on the presentation to the employers of a wage and working rules request for the painters of every section of the Boston district, to take effect January 1, unanimously favoring such action, and the council immediately authorized the appointment of a committee to consist of one member from each affiliated local to draft a code and wage scale and present recommendations at the next meeting.

WAITS WORD FROM HILTON.

Secretary-Treasurer D. D. Driscoll of the State Branch, A. F. of L., said yesterday in answer to an inquiry from a local union that he had received the registered mail receipt, but as yet no answer to the letter sent by orders of the State Branch to Senator Horton H. Hilton of Lowell requesting him to make good his public statement that he would meet a representative of labor on the public platform and discuss his labor record and his attitude on the "overtime" bill.

The executive board of the New England branch of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' League and Bartenders' International Alliance yesterday met in Hollis Hall to arrange for the annual convention of the New England branch. It was decided that it be held in Springfield, Sunday and Monday, January 13 and 14.

The board unanimously voted to urge a separate International for the Bartenders' Unions.

LABOR NOTES.

Timothy Sullivan of Park Department Assembly was yesterday elected district master workman of D. A. 30, K. of L., incorporated, which held its convention at No. 724 Washington street.

Cooks' Union No. 328 will hold a special meeting to-night at No. 724 Washington street to hear an address by T. J. Sullivan, of Hartford, international president, and also to nominate officers for the annual election.

The joint organizing committee of the Boston and Cambridge Piano and Organ Workers' Union last night tendered a farewell banquet to Thomas V. Fodzinsch, national organizer, who has been in charge of the organizing campaign in this vicinity for the past several months.

WARRANT FOR A DEAD MAN

A warrant for the arrest of a dead man was issued to-day by Judge Parmenter in the first session of the Municipal Court. The warrant calls for the arrest of David Lynch, who was taken into custody Saturday night by Patrolman Kilroy of the Lagrange street station, and who was found dead in his cell Sunday morning. It is customary to issue a warrant in all cases, even after the prisoner has been arrested, to protect the officer making the arrest against civil process.

David Lynch, who was sixty-five years of age, and lived in Beverly, was booked at the station house for drunkenness. Medical Examiner McDonald gives as the cause of death a fractured skull. How it was sustained is not known. The police declare he was apparently not suffering from any injury when arrested.

Rebellion.

When a nation rises in its wrath to throw off the shackles of a government that has become odious the standard of defiance is unfurled and the alarm sounded for attack. The rebellious spirit of ailments, arising from the stomach, liver, kidneys and blood, is speedily broken with Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound. Last year, in 13,500,000 instances, the rebellious attacks of disease were frustrated by taking this famous remedy. It is a purifier of the blood and a stimulator of the nerve system. It accepts no compromise, but overthrows the enemy completely, and in no instance extending a pardon to the vanquished foe. By removing the cause of the malady it performs a radical cure. NOTICE is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Arcadian Copper Company, organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, will be held at the office of the company, Hudson County National Bank Building, Nos. 243 and 245 Washington street, Jersey City, N. J., on Monday, November 19, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose and object of seeing if the stockholders will authorize the sale and conveyance, for such price as may be determined upon by the directors of the Arcadian Copper Company, to the Quincy Mining Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan, of the property now owned by the Arcadian Copper Company, which was acquired by it from the St. Mary's Copper Company, containing about eight hundred (800) acres, and described as follows: The north half of Section Eighteen (18), in Township Fifty-five (55), north of Range Thirty-three (33) west, and the north half and the southwest quarter of Section Thirteen (13), in Township Fifty-five (55), north of Range Thirty-four (34) west, situated in the County of Houghton and State of Michigan, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

The transfer books of the company will be closed for the meeting at the close of business October 24, 1906, and remain closed until November 20, 1906.

CHARLES D. BURRAGE,
Secretary and a Director of the ARCADIAN COPPER COMPANY.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

The Independence League pledges itself not to solicit or accept contributions from any monopoly, any corporation or any individual known to be profiting by political favors

The Independence League is now engaged in a political battle for the benefit of the people. In order to carry this warfare to a successful conclusion, so that the people may reap the reward, money is absolutely essential for the payment of the legitimate expenses of the campaign, such as printing, the hiring of halls, etc.

WE THEREFORE APPEAL TO ALL PATRIOTIC CITIZENS FOR SUCH FINANCIAL AID AS THEY MAY BE ABLE TO RENDER WITHIN THEIR MEANS.

We wish to impress those in sympathy with the Independence League and its objects that no one need feel any embarrassment in contributing a small amount. INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE.

Please send all contributions to J. F. Davis, Treasurer, Room 402, Winthrop Building, 7 Water Street, Boston, Mass.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

The Democratic voters of Boston are hereby requested to meet in their respective precinct polling places on Thursday, November 15th, 1906, between the hours of 6 a. m. and 4 p. m. to nominate a candidate for Street Commissioner, to nominate candidates for the Board of Aldermen, to nominate candidates for the Common Council, to elect delegates to the Municipal Convention, and to elect members of the Ward Committee for the ensuing year.

Nomination papers must be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Democratic City Committee, 228 Washington street, on or before 5 o'clock p. m., Saturday, October 27th, 1906.

Nomination papers will be ready for distribution at said office at 5 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, October 23rd, 1906.

The first hour for filing nomination papers will be 3 o'clock p. m., Wednesday, October 24th, 1906.

The primaries will be held in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 11 of the Revised Laws, and all acts supplementary and amendatory thereto.

Democratic City Committee of Boston,
WILLIAM F. McCLELLAN, President,
CHARLES S. SULLIVAN, Secretary.

COLLEGE GAMES OF THE WEEK.

Wednesday—Gettysburg vs. Lebanon, at Gettysburg; Annapolis vs. Western Maryland, at Annapolis.

Saturday—Harvard vs. West Point, at West Point; Yale vs. Amherst, at New Haven; Princeton vs. Cornell, at New York; University of Pennsylvania vs. Indians, at Philadelphia; Dartmouth vs. Williams, at Springfield; Tufts vs. Maine, at Medford; Trinity vs. Springfield T. S., at Springfield; Swarthmore vs. Gettysburg, at Swarthmore; Bowdoin vs. Bates, at Brunswick; Chicago vs. Indiana, at Chicago; Annapolis vs. Bucknell, at Annapolis; Massachusetts Aggies vs. Rhode Island, at Amherst; Wesleyan vs. Vermont, at Middletown; Holy Cross vs. Worcester Tech, at Worcester.

Harvard gets her first real tryout this week when Captain Foster's men go to West Point to play the Cadets on Saturday, and against the soldiers they will have a chance to show what they are good for.

West Point expects to make as strong a showing as usual against the Crimson, and this week will spend some time on a defence to meet the Harvard attack. Lieutenant Charlie Rockwell, a Harvard '04 man, and now of the Cadets' coaching staff, saw Harvard play on Saturday in order to give his team some special preparation for Saturday's game. In the last few years Harvard has by good luck defeated West Point by a single touchdown.

One of the most encouraging things about Saturday's game from a Harvard standpoint was the success with which Harvard played the open game. Heretofore she has played mostly old-fashioned football. But in her last game Harvard used the outside kick with exceptional success, the forward pass with better luck than before, and besides succeeded better on quarterback runs, end runs and plays just outside tackle.

Harvard success thus far is unquestionably due to two things—the condition of the men and the painstaking signal drill through which Coach Reid is putting the team. The condition of Captain Foster's team is the best of any Harvard team of recent years. The men are being given a fair amount of hard scrimmage work, but they are not being driven at this five days a week and then expected to be fresh for a game on Saturday.

So far the coaches have recognized the fact that the condition of the men is half the game, but there are those who fear that one of these fine days the coaches will lapse back into their old "system" of driving the team.

The condition of the team is shown by the fact that not once in two twenty-minute halves on Saturday was time taken out for a Harvard man. Only two or three times has time been taken out this season. A number of substitutes were put into the game on Saturday, but all of the men replaced came out of the game fresh.

WANT M'GOVERN AND 'CORBETT'

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Harry Pollok said yesterday that he had received a telegram from Al Herford, manager of the Eutaw Athletic Club of Baltimore, offering $15,000 for a fifteen-round go between Terry McGovern and "Young Corbett."

Pollok said he would like to hear from Joe Humphreys. Touching on and appertaining to that $5,000 side bet previously referred to by Pollok as a requisite to a meeting between his man and Terry, it was intimated that in the presence of a purse of $15,000 there was no need of standing on formalities.

LINCOLN CLUB HAS A FAST BOUT TOMORROW

Local interest this week centres in the bout at the Lincoln A. C. on Tuesday night when Rouse O'Brien and Matty Baldwin strike the hostile attitude in the Chelsea fistic shop.

Not only will this match bring out all the fans from South Boston and Charlestown, where the two boys come from, but a big quota of members will be on hand assured that they will see a swell exhibition of the Queensberry game as only such two little slashers can give.

Neither boy is a champion, but both are ambitious to get to the top, and will display all they know of ring culture.

As clever dispensers of wallops they are about the best we have. It's not wading in blindly with them, but rushing, with plenty of head work on tap and using bunches of cleverness in wielding their mits.

Both boys have picked up in putting steam in their handouts and they are likely to inflict a lot of damage before the mill is over. They don't flash their arms around wasting anything, being particularly true hitters from any angle.

The little Charlestown slugger has been down to the Diamond Hill training quarters for several weeks and should be a revelation as a fighting machine when he enters the ring. He prepared for Tommy Murphy and knew that he had a job, so trained accordingly, and now O'Brien must offset what was in store for the Harlemite.

Baldwin will probably rule a slight favorite on account of his recent form. His draw with Dave Deshler and superior showing with Chester Goodwin is sufficient to put him in front, as O'Brien has been forced to be absent from the ring because of injuries. But the latter is always in trim and naturally strong and may have just the style to confuse Matty with.

The preliminaries are good, with Frank Russell meeting Denney Ryan and a semi-final bout between Billy Connaty of Cambridge and Young Kloby of Lawrence.

There are some good bouts on the schedule this week, provided they are pulled off as expected.

It's pretty hard to state whether or not Joe Thomas will fight at Colma to-morrow night. He was matched with Dick Fitzpatrick, but the Chicagoan did not like the weight and the agreements.

Benny Yanger and Steve Kinney will fight at Davenport, Ia., on Wednesday. It promises to be a very good fight. Kinney's most recent ring contest was with Joe Galligan, and though the decision was a draw, Steve was entitled to the decision. Kinney is coming along all the time, and though Yanger is a very fast boxer and a very hard puncher he will find that Kinney is a foeman worthy of his best efforts.

Harry Lewis, who has come along splendidly, as his quick victory over Willie Fitzgerald and his defeat of Jack Dougherty in a ten-round bout show, will meet Mike Ward at Grand Rapids, Mich., on Thursday night. Judging by the way Harry is travelling he ought to be a winner over the Sarnia boy.

Young Erne and Unk Russell will meet at Philadelphia again on Saturday. Their last contest was a corker and attended by one of the biggest crowds ever at a boxing game in Philadelphia.

Gus Bezenah, the featherweight of the fighting Cincinnati family, is booked for a bout at Seattle, Wash., on Saturday.

There are several other ring contests for the week, but outside of the Freddy Welsh Tim Callahan bout at Dayton, O., to-night there is nothing very important.

Though the Coffroth-Graney Fight Cabinet Is at Odds There Is

AMPLE FIGHT MONEY IN FRISCO

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—Eastern sporting writers noticed that Jack O'Brien gave Los Angeles the preference over San Francisco as a field of operations, and they assigned a wrong cause for the dapper Philadelphian's choice of location. They think that Jack, who is as wise as an owl in all things, could, with the game he gets his living by, after looking the ground over, decide that what remains of this town cannot make it worth while for an associate world's champion to tarry here.

This is all a mistake. San Francisco has plenty of money to spend on pugilistic entertainment. It paid over $7,000 for the privilege of seeing Dick Hyland and Eddie Hanlon in action, and the chances are that the same pair of lads could not have drawn $3,000 in the days before the fire.

The outlaw amateurs whang one another in the presence of congested houses once a week, and the amount of shop a Queensberry paragrapher is required to talk when he accosts an acquaintance on the streets, cars and elsewhere shows that interest in the sport is general. It wasn't a prospect of a poor harvest that caused O'Brien to snatch up his dolls and clear to Los Angeles—it was because of a split in the cabinet of San Francisco's one and only fight trust.

If a recently arrived traveller from the southland speaks the truth, O'Brien delivered himself as follows one evening:

"It seems to me that Coffroth and Graney are engaged in a fight to a finish for the control of the boxing situation up there. Each of them stands well politically, and each has a big personal reputation and a large following. It did not take me long to determine that I was between two fires, and as I did not know which one to warm up to, I came here to look for work. Coffroth and Graney remind me of the old circus gag—working together, they are like a pair of scissors; with a screw loose they become a couple of daggers. I guess there are big houses to be had in San Francisco, but while the vendetta lasts a fellow would never know where he was going to land. That's why I'm in Los Angeles."

O'Brien Was a Wise One.

When O'Brien hears there is talk of getting out an injunction to prevent the Kaufmann-Berger contest from taking place because Coffroth leased one pavilion after Graney as president of the fight trust has leased another, he will probably shake hands with himself and say: "Jack, old fellow, you saw what was coming and you did not linger."

Meanwhile sporting men are beginning to ask where this Coffroth-Graney business is going to end. There is no particular reason why the gentlemen named shouldn't enjoy a personal feud, but it is a pity that their differences should interfere with the passing of a sport with which they both have been so long identified.

Fans Can't Talk of Future.

As matters stand, fight fans do not care to discuss projected events seriously, not knowing whether such events will ever come to a head.

Sporting writers are hampered in their work for similar reasons, and the effect generally of this rift in the fight trust lute is disquieting and confusing.

Jack O'Brien must have felt a full-sized tremor of pride jiggle his spine when he succeeded in putting out both Fred Cooley and Jim Temple on contract time at Los Angeles last Tuesday night. This thing of attempting the demolition of two rivals in one evening is risky at the best of times, and any one having doubts on the subject can question big Jim Jeffries about it.

In O'Brien's case there seems to be more than the usual cause for self-recognition. That he scored with both barrels, as it were, his detractors will have to take refuge behind the argument that the Philadelphian appears to be acquiring greater punching power.

The road is clear now for a Jack O'Brien-Tommy Burns clash, and I have no doubt it will be a spiteful affair if the men are sent to the scratch.

By the way, the fight in question will afford the reporters who describe the rounds in detail a chance to diversify their work. Any one who has done much of that kind of thing knows how monotonous constant repetition of a name becomes, but when you have to deal with a brace of fighters each possessing two names the possibilities are encouraging.

Change for Reporters.

For instance:

Round 14 and last—Jack O'Brien punched Tommy Burns's head and Noah Brusso countered on Joe Hagan's jaw. O'Brien swung his right and Burns fell. Hagan walked to his corner. Brusso regained his feet, but Burns was floored again. Brusso rolled on his back and Burns was counted out. Smiles wreathed Hagan's face as he heard the announcement, "O'Brien wins."

Honey Mellody's defeat of Joe Walcott sends Joe Thomas to the forefront of the welterweights of all complexions, for if Honey can down the Barbadoes demon and Thomas can knock out Mellody, there is no longer occasion to distinguish kingpin welters by their color.

For an interesting match it might do to sign up Mellody and Thomas a second time, or if Honey is deemed too easy, why not give Mike, the Twin, or Jimmy Gardner a chance?

There is some talk of putting our old friend Billy Rodenbach of New York and Thomas into the ring at Colma, but if "Rodey" balks and fills the way most amateurs do before taking the plunge into professionalism, Thomas will have grown big enough to fight Jeffries by the time the New Yorker has fully made up his mind to sign.

HUDSON SUED FOR $25,000

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 22.—Scott Hudson, known the country over as a trainer of trotting and running horses, has been made the defendant in a suit brought by Mrs. E. C. Pepper, owner of Meadowthrope Farm, in which the latter prays for $25,000 damages.

It is alleged by Mrs. Pepper that she entered into an agreement with Hudson last year whereby he was to become half-owner of a number of thoroughbred yearlings, he to train and race them over the various race tracks in this country and Canada. Hudson was expected to make an accounting of the expenses and winnings of the horses, and Mrs. Pepper was to receive one-half of the net winnings.

In her petition Mrs. Pepper alleges that Hudson carelessly, recklessly and wantonly raced the horses in such a manner as to greatly depreciate their value, and in many other ways has failed to carry out the contract, a copy of which was filed with the court.

Hudson denies any dealings with Mrs. Pepper, but says that he entered into contract with James E. Pepper, with whom he has made full settlement. Regarding the depreciation of the horses, Hudson says he is willing to stand on his record of a turfman as a denial of the charge.

Before going with the runners Hudson was in partnership with the Concord, N. H., horseman, James Y. Gatcomb, the two making one of the most sensational campaigns ever known in the history of the light harness horse world. This was four years ago. Recently he sold out all of his runners and announced his retirement from the racing sport.

HARVARD FRESHMEN TRACK GAMES TODAY

Track games open to Harvard freshmen only will be held in the Stadium at 4 o'clock this afternoon. This is a scheme invented last year by the track authorities for trying out the new material, and as freshmen are not eligible for the varsity team this year, everybody is anxious to see what material has been ruled out by the new rules.

An entry list of ninety-six names shows that the first year men are taking an interest in the games, and some good performances are looked for.

Ross's Desire Is to Drive Auto

FIVE MILES IN 2 MIN.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

It is possible that another steam creation, one rivalling in speed and ability the machine driven by Fred Marriott, will make its appearance at the Ormond tournament next February. Although Louis Ross is maintaining a discreet silence there is every reason to believe that he is busy designing and likewise constructing an improved machine on that with which he won the Sir Thomas Dewar trophy two years ago. For various good and sufficient reasons Ross refrained from actively entering the list at Ormond this year. He was present in person. He critically inspected every machine at the beach, both steam and gasolene, with a view, it is said, of producing something which will get below the time established by Marriott. Ross is nothing if not ambitious and the mile mark is not his one great desire. Demorgest drove two miles within the minute. Ross now says five miles within the two minutes is what he desires and he is satisfied that he can reach that point with the next racing machine that he constructs. Those who know the Newton man are satisfied that he can accomplish as much in the speed line as any other builder and wish him all success in his new undertaking.

* * *

The claim that the recent accident in Sudbury was caused by defective steering gear is absolutely without foundation. The day following the accident I personally saw the machine, inspected the steering gear, likewise the brakes, and found both of them to be in the best possible condition. It was no fault of the car that it turned over. Everything save the rear wheel and the front axle was in excellent condition. The front axle had become twisted as a result of the force of the impact. The car otherwise was in good condition.

The banquet committee of the Automobile Club of America, Colgate Hoyt, Albert R. Shattuck and Frank R. Lawrence, have sent out notices to members of the organization warning them not to make other engagements for Saturday evening, December 8, as the A. C. A. will hold its eighth annual banquet that night. The date selected is the last day of the club's automobile show at the Grand Central Palace, and the banquet will be held at Sherry's.

* * *

A California automobilist who witnessed the elimination trial by which the American team for the Vanderbilt cup race was selected has been describing the manner in which the various drivers made the turns on the course. "Le Blon was the prettiest driver of the lot," says he. "When he came around a turn he swept along smoothly, and never swayed out of the curve he was making. He never underestimated or overestimated his speed, but always came up to the difficult parts of the course at just the right rate to negotiate the turn. The performance of Harding in the Haynes was the next best, and Tracy also did well, but at the difficult turns he slowed down to a much lower rate of speed than the others. Once he almost stopped, having made a false estimate of his speed. Some of the drivers would swerve from side to side and slide around the corners, first one way and then another, and it is a wonder they stayed on the course."

WILL WALK FOR A CAKE

Professor Herbert Murray, the champion of New England, will be at the big cakewalk at the Columbia Theatre tomorrow night to defend his title against all comers, white or colored. This event was scheduled for last Tuesday night, but was postponed on account of the Walcott-Mellody fight in Chelsea. To-morrow night a big gathering of cakewalkers from all over New England will strive for the honor and for the two big prizes offered by Manager Farren. The audience will be asked to select the winners, which will put a quietus to all claims of favoritism. Contestants are requested to report at the theatre before 9 o'clock.

SIR THOMAS STILL THINKS OF THE CUP

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Sir Thomas Lipton and party left to-night for New York, where he will sail for home about November 10. He said he thought he would make one more attempt to lift the cup.

"And don't you believe," he added, "that it would be a good thing for it to go back to its old home just once more? I do."

TERRIER SHOW STARTS NOV. 14

The Boston Terrier Club has opened an office at 418 Tremont Building, where the work of preparing for the annual specialty show of the club will be carried on. This week the premium lists and entry blanks will be sent out to owners and breeders of Boston terriers, and the lists will close on November 1, but all entries mailed up to midnight on that night will be accepted by the club. The show will last four days, beginning November 14.

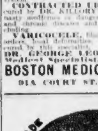

At a meeting of the committee in charge of the affair, held in the office the other day, it was learned that a very large number of specials had already been donated by specialty clubs about the country, while the cash offerings of the club alone will be $2,000, a record amount for a show that charges but three dollars entrance fee.

J. ED. GRILLO COMES TO HUB

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 22.—J. Edward Grillo, the well-known Cincinnati sporting writer, former president of the American Baseball Association, and until last Saturday president of the Toledo Exhibition Company, operating the Toledo A. A. baseball club, will enter the National League. According to a former business associate, he has accepted the business management of the Boston National League team, and is now preparing to remove his family to the Hub. Grillo last Saturday disposed of his stock in the Toledo team to W. R. Armour of Detroit, and since then he has been offered secretaryships in both the National and American Leagues.

Synopsis

SIBYL BURNET, a beautiful New York society girl, daughter of a wealthy leather merchant, with a palace on Riverside Drive and a country home at Bayside, playfully asks Wilfrid Hughes, a friend and lover of her school days, to marry her.

This Hughes declines to do firmly but politely, suggesting that she accept instead Elliot Winsloe, a friend of her brother Jack, who had plainly shown his mad infatuation for this dashing beauty. "Tibbie," as Sibyl is called by every one, tells her old friend that is the only course left open to her if he refuses to become her husband.

"It's a secret. I've told nobody; therefore you'll not say a word, will you?" said Tibbie.

"Certainly not. But I congratulate you. Winsloe is, I believe, a real good fellow, and I can only hope you will love him," Wilfrid answered.

"I shall learn to love him—in time, I suppose," she answered. "Look, there he is."

And glancing down I saw the well-set-up figure striding over the lawn, together with her brother Jack, my old friend, Eric Domville, Tom Wydcombe and several ladies of the house party.

"Tibbie," I said, seriously, turning to her, "you know we've known each other many years. I was your first sweetheart, and afterward your friend. I am still your firm friend, and as such I may be permitted to give you a single word of advice—to urge you not to marry that man unless you really love him. Is it wise of you? Remember, I am still your platonic friend, and have every regard for your future happiness. To serve you I am always ready. That you know. Only command me, Tibbie."

She hesitated for a moment, then, turning to me with that strange, anxious look upon her countenance, an expression most unusual for her, she said in a low, intense voice:

"I wonder if I might actually take you at your word, Wilfrid. I wonder if—if"—and she hesitated, pursing her lips, and I saw that her hand trembled.

"Of course, I'm always ready to assist you," I said, somewhat surprised at her sudden change of manner.

"Ah, no," she gasped, suddenly pale to the lips, a strange look of terror in her eyes. "My secret! I am very foolish. I cannot tell it to you—you of all men. It is too terrible. You would hate me."

"Your secret!" I echoed. "What secret, Tibbie? Tell me."

But she turned away from me and, covering her white face with her hands, burst into a flood of tears.

It was not long, however, before Wilfrid discovered at least part of Tibbie's secret. That night after dinner his best friend, Eric Domville, told him of a scene he had witnessed in the Tennant woods that afternoon—a secret meeting and a quarrel between Tibbie and some unknown man.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"AT last, after a quarter of an hour, during which time I learned that he had loved her in secret for two years, she suddenly pushed him from her, and spoke quite seriously, saying, 'All this is entirely useless, my dear Charles. I may as well tell you the truth at once and end this folly forever. I am engaged to Mr. Winsloe.'

"In an instant the fellow's affection turned to an ungovernable fury. He raved and threatened, declaring that she was his, and no one else's, and that she should never marry Winsloe.

"At all this, however, Tibbie only laughed defiantly, apparently treating his words as mere empty threats, until of a sudden he took her roughly by the shoulders and glaring into her face said: 'Sybil! You will marry me or I will tell the world the truth! You know what I mean. I'm not to be trifled with. Decide.'

"Then occurred a terrible scene between them.

"She openly accused him of attempting to blackmail her, while he, on his part, reiterated his love, declaring that while he lived she should never marry another. I would have gone forward to protect her, but how could I? By so doing I should only have acknowledged myself as a mean eavesdropper.

"Therefore, overhearing that which I had no desire to hear, I turned and crept back into the field as noiselessly as I came. Then," and he lowered his voice, and speaking slowly: "Then five minutes later, as I was making my way back to the party, I heard a shot from the woods—a revolver shot I knew by the sound. But I went on in wonder and fear. I looked at my watch and saw that it was just 4 o'clock.

"And at a little after half past she was with me in the house. Perhaps the fellow fired at her?" I suggested, staring at him.

"She Threatened Him"

"Or she at him?" Eric said in a very low, hard tone. "Recollect this ruffian is a lover, and, moreover, is in possession of some secret, which she fears may be revealed. I saw a revolver in her hand, Wilfrid," he added, hoarsely. "She threatened him with it. And she shot him! What can we do to save her?"

Scarcely had he whispered this serious question when Rainer, the under-butler, entered to inquire if we desired anything further, and on my replying in the negative, the man said:

"There's been a terrible affair up in the wood, sir. John Harris, the watchman, on going his rounds to-night found a man shot dead. They sent down to the house to telephone to the doctor half an hour ago."

"Who's the man?" I gasped, springing up at the servant's startling declaration, while Eric stood rigid.

"Nobody knows. They haven't brought him down to the village yet."

Eric and I exchanged glances. But we were silent—and our silence was surely more expressive than words.

"It's probably some poor beggar who's committed suicide," I remarked, in order to allay Rainer's suspicions if he had noticed the change in our countenances when he made the startling announcement.

"He's badly dressed," Harris says. Perhaps he's a tramp," remarked the servant.

"Perhaps so. We want nothing more, Rainer, to-night," I added.

"Very good, sir," and the man bowed and withdrew, closing the door after him.

"What shall we do?" whispered Eric, quickly, his face pale beneath the sun tan.

I stood staring at my friend, unable to utter a word.

Was that Sibyl's secret—the secret that she had been so very near revealing to me? I recollected those strange words of hers, "You would hate me!" Yes, her secret was a guilty one.

"Do?" I echoed at last in a low whisper, fearing Rainer might be listening. "Why we must make our own inquiries before those local busy-bodies of police step in and bungle the affair. She must be saved—don't you agree?"

"Yes. At all costs we must save her," he cried quickly. "Let's go out and see who the fellow is."

"Not yet. Wait for half an hour or so, until they're all gone to bed. The servants' hall is all in a flutter, it seems, and the maid will be about frightened and whispering. If we are to get away unseen we must slip out of the window. All the doors are closed now, and the dogs are loose in the yard."

"We Must Wait."

"You're right, old fellow. We must wait a while," he agreed. "But what's your private opinion of the affair?"

"I have none," was the blank reply. "Until I have some proof I suspect nobody."

"Quite so. Let's leave Tibbie entirely out of the question. Remember, not a word to any one of what I've told you, for I'm the principal witness against her. Think, if they called me. My evidence would condemn her!"

"I regard all that you've told me, Eric, as unsaid," I responded. "Tibbie is my friend."

"But you don't think I've lied, do you?" he asked quickly, not grasping my meaning.

"Of course not. Why should you? We know each other too well to make false charges against our friends," I answered. "It is a mystery—a complete mystery."

"Absolutely. I was struck dumb when I discovered her in the arms of the fellow. I couldn't really believe my own eyes." Then, after a pause, he asked in a lower tone, "What secret of hers did he hold, I wonder?"

"Ah! what indeed?"

"To me, it is very evident that she met the fellow at that lone spot under compulsion. She may have reciprocated his affection at one time, but her manner was inert and unresponsive. She allowed him to caress her because she was in deadly fear—I'm absolutely certain of that."

"Then she didn't betray any love for him?"

"None whatever. In his reproaches, however, he reminded her of how she had once loved him, and allowed him to think that he might aspire to her hand.

"He reproached her with cruelty and double-dealing, saying that she had betrayed him to his enemies, and that now, in return, he would reveal to the world her dark and terrible secret. This announcement electrified her. Until that moment she apparently had no idea of her future entirely in his hands—and—well, that's all."

Awake in Terror

I stood upon the hearthrug, my hands deep in my trousers pocket, my back to the high old stone mantel, and remained silent. What could I say? What could I think of the woman who was in her room somewhere above in that great old mansion—the woman who was, no doubt, still awake in terror of the morrow?

The stable clock clanged out half-past two, and presently Eric stepped on tiptoe to the door, opened it and looked down the great hall, dark, gloomy and mysterious.

Across the hall he crept until lost in the darkness, and a few minutes later returned, carrying two hats and saying that all was quiet in the servants' quarters, and that everybody had gone to bed.

Then we closed the door, took a wooden chair to the window, opened it and scrambled through, dropping noiselessly down upon the grass beyond.

We closed the old window behind us lest the night watchman should discover it open and raise an alarm, and then started off together across the lawn, in the direction of Sheridan drive, that led away down to the little town.

The night was bright and starlit, but over the grass hung a heavy white mist, especially in the hollows.

For a long time neither of us spoke, but presently, as we sped briskly along, Eric said:

"We must pretend that Rainer has aroused our curiosity, otherwise the villagers will think our visit strange at this hour. Our first object must be to establish the fellow's identity. At present we know his name to be Charles—and that's all."

With this I agreed and we walked on in silence, each occupied with his thoughts, until we reached the little town. Evidently the news of the murder had been received so late that it had not been noised about, for there was no crowd of curious seekers for information, as I had feared. At the town hall we found a sleepy desk sergeant on duty.

"Good morning, Booth," said Domville, who was acquainted with most of the officials in the neighborhood. "What has happened? The butler up at Burnet's brought in a wild-eyed story of a murder back in the woods, and we were curious enough to walk down here to inquire about it."

Shot to Death

"Well, sir, it does look like a murder, according to what I hear," said the sergeant, straightening up with official importance, "but, of course, we haven't any details yet. We got a report from John Harris, a watchman that patrols around some of the houses up that way, that he came across a dead man in the patch of woods known as Hubbard's woods, shot through the chest. That's all we know yet. We telephoned the coroner's office and we're waiting for instructions."

"Has the victim been recognized?" I asked eagerly.

"Not yet," said the sergeant, "but Harris says he is poorly dressed and looks like a tramp. Probably he tried to hold up somebody and got shot for his trouble," concluded the desk sergeant philosophically.

"And meanwhile the body is up there in the woods? Is anybody with it?"

"No, sir. We thought it best to leave it there until the deputy coroner or the coroner's physician sees it just as it was found. We don't want a crowd up there to tread out any evidence of a struggle there might be."

At that instant a serious thought occurred to me. Had the dead man on him any letter of Sibyl or anything to connect her with him?

"Well," I said, as carelessly as I could, considering the stress of excitement under which I was laboring, "we are interested to see who the poor fellow is. Suppose we walk up there, Eric, and have a look at the body?"

"Very well, gentlemen," said the sergeant, "but you won't tread around any more than you can help, will you? If there's been murder done we want to catch the guilty party."

"Of course," said Domville, "we shall wait for you if you're coming up with the doctor. We don't know where the body is."

"Oh, yes, I never thought of that," said the sergeant. "All right, gentlemen. I'll be up after you as soon as the doctor comes. He'll drive me up there in his rig."

To the Tragedy's Scene

We hurried out of the little police station and struck along the road in the darkness.

"We must act quickly. Come, hurry along!" I exclaimed. "We haven't a second to spare."

"Why?" asked Domville, in some surprise.

"Didn't you say that we must save Tibbie?" I asked. "Can't you see her serious peril? The fellow may have on him some letter or something that may incriminate her. We must get there and search him before Booth brings the doctor. What fortune that the body has been left unattended!"

"But is it?" Eric queried. "Don't you think that Harris has spread the news among the other watchmen, and one or other of them is lurking near out of curiosity? Wouldn't it be infernally awkward for us if we were discovered rifling the dead man's pockets?"

"We must risk everything—for Tibbie's sake, for the sake of the family," I declared decisively, and, impelled by my words, he hurried along at my side.

"You have given it as your opinion that they were once lovers," I continued. "Therefore if he had come there to blackmail her, what more natural than that he should carry with him something by which to impress her with his power over her? At all costs, therefore, we must try to satisfy ourselves that there is nothing to incriminate her."

Too Terrible

"This is not the moment to discuss the affair. We must act," I urged, and together we got over a gate and turned into a grass field which was a shorter cut to the wood.

"This way," my friend directed. "The spot is up at that corner," pointing away up the hill, where the wood loomed darkly against the sky.

Truth to tell, I shared Eric's fear that Harris or one of his sons might be lurking in the neighborhood, yet I said nothing. My only thought was for the woman who had been my friend, my playmate, the dainty love of my early youth. She might be all that her enemies said of her, yet for her mother's sake, for Jack's sake, I meant—if possible—to save her.

"YES, THERE, SPREAD BEFORE US, WAS THE DEAD MAN'S SECRET."

Don't Miss This Great Story

Begin to-day to read this romance of love and mystery, with a fascinating New York girl as the heroine. It deals with the life and doings of New York's "400" in realistic and dramatic fashion.

How Did You Solve the Servant Girl Problem? Tell Us About It

LET'S hear both sides of the question of the present servant girl famine in Boston. What'se the cause of it? That it exists none familiar with the facts can doubt for an instant.

One employment office declared in the BOSTON AMERICAN, the other day, that it could find places for 2,000 girls for general housework.

Housewives who have been on the hunt for girls will testify to the dearth of domestics. There are plenty of "second girls," "cooks," "laundresses" "waitresses," etc., but what's become of all the girls that do general housework?

If you have solved the difficult problem, let us all have the benefit of your experience. Let us hear the servant girls' side of the question. Let us discuss both sides of this problem of vital interest to thousands of New England housekeepers.

Write your experience—whether as domestic or housekeeper, and address Home Magazine Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street. Names will not be published if so desired.

Here are some of the letters received this morning:

A GIRL'S SOLUTION

EDITOR HOME MAGAZINE:

For eight years I was in the employ of a small Boston family, doing general housework. A girl could not ask a better home. I had to work but I was contented and happy and was always treated fairly.

Two years ago, when the family broke up housekeeping, I tried to get another position. I have been in six different places since. I have left them, not because the work was too hard. Oh, no. It was because of the treatment they gave me. Now I am out of work.

I write this to show you something about the servant girl's side of the question. Let some women who can't get girls think about it.

MISS B. W. M.

Newton.

AN EMPLOYER'S VIEW

EDITOR HOME MAGAZINE:

Your article on "Servant Girl Famine" shows a very serious side of the servant problem for housekeepers to consider. Various reasons are given for the dearth, but there is only one real reason. The housegirl of to-day is held in the strictest sense a servant, and in many families in an obnoxious sense.

When heads of families and restaurants, hotels, etc., will learn to treat them courteously and not crowd too many hours into the day's work there will be more help at their command. In hotels and dining rooms the State law is not lived up to and might against right prevails.

With twelve years' experience in the employment business I speak advisedly when I say that reform is needed in this matter. Kindness and appreciation of a class so needful will make a wonderful change. Help will respect themselves if respected and will not change so often. The Golden Rule lived up to will go a great way in remedying the existing famine.

Lowell. "EMPLOYMENT."

FROM A HOUSEKEEPER

EDITOR HOME MAGAZINE:

While my neighbors are having almost constant trouble in finding good servant girls and in keeping them, I have been extremely fortunate. In twelve years of housekeeping I have had two girls.

The first lived with me for four years, leaving to get married—a very commendable ambition.

Her successor has been with me now for eight years, and is a family institution.

Is this luck? I don't believe so, for when I see the treatment accorded their girls by some of my friends, I do not wonder that they are in constant hot water.

I don't, by any means, make my girl a member of my family. But I do treat her courteously and fairly every day in the week. I do not ask her to shoulder too heavy burdens, yet she has plenty of work to do. I show her every consideration. I believe her complaints to me are as worthy of attention as are my complaints to her. I think this is the secret of my "good luck" with servant girls. "HOUSEKEEPER."

FOR STAINED FINGERS

FOR the unpleasant roughness and stains on the fingers caused by working with fruit, at night rub a little diluted lemon juice well into the skin, then dry flour sulphur. After a few moments wash the hands as usual, then gently rub in some good lotion or cream.

Ways to Dispose of Facial Blemishes

THOUGH opinion may be divided as to whether a mustache is an ornament or not to the "mere man," there is no doubt whatever that a hirsute growth of any kind on lip, face or chin is nothing short of a disfigurement to a woman. And there are many suffering from this curse.

Even a few hairs are a worry, while if the growth be thick it is the source of much suffering to a sensitive woman.

Many methods are employed to get rid of superfluous hairs—by means of depilatories, plucking them out, pumice-stone, and even in some cases shaving is resorted to.

These methods, however, always end by making the latter state worse than the first. Depilatories only touch the hairs on the surface, plucking out makes them grow thicker and coarser, pumice-stone hardens the skin, and every one knows the appearance of the skin after shaving.

Many cures, too, are advertised, yet the only permanent one known is electrolysis. Nothing but the electric needle can touch and destroy the root or the papillae at the base of the follicle, in which the hair is contained, without injuring the skin—even the X rays have been tried and found useless.

No depilatory, liquid, or otherwise, no matter what is stated, can kill the hair without injury; it can only destroy the hair on the surface, which usually grows again, and thicker than before, especially where there is a predisposition to such growth.

If it should do more than this it will not only destroy the hair—though even this is not certain—but the color, or pigment, as well as the sebaceous glands and other things on which the life of the skin depends, and this will either be white or shrivelled, or more serious and permanent harm may be done.

Each hair is contained in a sheath or follicle, at the bottom of which are the papillae or reproductive portions from which the hair grows. This, too, may lie at various depths—in the case of coarse hairs it is quite deep down in the skin.

And it follows that no surface preparation can touch the root without injury. Since electrolysis is the only cure, a little explanation might be welcome. There are many anxious to rid themselves of the encumbrance, but who from ignorance hesitate to undertake the treatment.

And though the electric needle is the only cure, there are so many things to be considered—the health, the nature of the skin, etc.—that even in this method harm may be done by an inexperienced operator, and only a reliable and experienced one should be resorted to.

Electrolysis cannot be hurried. To be successful an operator must "hasten slowly." If the hairs be coarse, close care must be taken to pick them out so as not to puncture the skin; while, again, some skins are sensitive and not able to stand lengthy treatment without causing marks.

Then, too, the hairs may be crooked in growth and may need a stronger current, and though thirty to forty are the average number removed at a sitting, this must depend on the patient and the judgment of the operator.

ECONOMY CRULLERS

ONE and one-half cups of granulated sugar, two eggs, two and one-half tablespoons of melted lard, a little grated nutmeg, one pint of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in the milk, a pinch of salt, flour to make a dough—not too stiff. Put in icebox covered with a plate. Cut off enough to fry as needed. This recipe is both cheap and excellent.

GRAPE JUICE

PICK the grapes from the stems, pinching them to allow the juice to escape, and to every three measures of fruit allow two of water. Cook till soft and drain in flannel bag; don't squeeze bag as it makes the juice muddy. Measure the juice and use one third as much sugar. Heat thoroughly, but don't boil, as it makes it foamy. If the grapes are sour more sugar may be added to suit the taste. If too rich, water may be added when serving, and if mould collects on top it can easily be removed with a broom corn. Have used this recipe several years and find it a great help for the sick and convalescent.

POTATO FLOUR CAKE

ONE cup granulated sugar, four eggs, one even teaspoon baking powder, one-half cup potato flour; flavor with orange extract, pinch of salt. Beat eggs very light, add sugar little a time until all used, then beat ten minutes; add flour same as sugar. Beat whites very stiff and fold in gently with flavoring and salt. Will be all foamy; bake slowly at first; is very fine grain and light. The potato flour can be bought at some of the large grocery stores or at any Swedish baker, for it is a Scandinavian flour. This is a tried recipe.

MORE UNIONS CALL DRAPER THEIR ENEMY

Republican Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor Denounced as Foe of Labor.

HIS DEFEAT DEMANDED

More labor organizations have adopted resolutions denouncing Eben S. Draper for Lieutenant-Governor and calling upon organized labor throughout the State to rally to the support of E. Gerry Brown. They are:

Painters' District Council.

Quincy Painters' Union No. 293.

Whitman Boot and Shoe Workers' Union No. 105.

Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass Moulders, Brass and Silver Workers' Union of North America, Local No. 292, of Southbridge.

Painters' District Council.

The Painters' District Council of Boston and vicinity is composed of delegates from fifteen local unions. At yesterday's meeting in Wells Memorial building Fred Murray of Boston Painters' Union No. 11 offered the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously:

"Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Painters' District Council of Boston and vicinity, indorse the candidacy of E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor; and be it further

"Resolved, That each and every delegate to this council do his utmost to bring about his election, realizing, as we all do, that he has been a consistent and untiring worker in the interest of organized labor."

Quincy Painters' Union.

Resolutions condemning Guild and Draper and indorsing Moran and Brown were passed unanimously by Quincy Painters' Union No. 293. It was suggested by speakers that a "flying wedge" be formed in the interests of E. Gerry Brown, as he comes from Brockton, the city in which the first "flying wedge" was started. Following are the resolutions:

"Resolved, That we, members of Quincy Painters' Union No. 293, do most emphatically denounce the attitude of Guild and Draper toward organized labor; and

"Resolved, That, regardless of political belief, we vote as a body for Moran and Brown; and be it further

"Resolved, That we give our undivided support to the independent candidate for Representative, Robert Smith."

Whitman Shoe Workers.

Treers' Local No. 105, Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, of Whitman, at a largely attended meeting in Hibernian Hall, indorsed Moran and Brown, and condemned Guild and Draper, the former for his appointment of William F. Dana to the Supreme Court bench. The following resolutions were passed without a dissenting vote:

"Resolved, That we, the members of Treers' Local No. 105, indorse the action of the State Branch, A. F. of L., in condemning Eben S. Draper as candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and do all in our power to place in that position E. Gerry Brown, whom we know to be a staunch union labor man, and who has always been an active worker in the interest of organized labor; and be it further

"Resolved, That Curtis Guild, by his appointment of William F. Dana to the Supreme Court, has convinced us that he is an enemy of organized labor, and we therefore indorse John B. Moran for Governor and pledge him our support."

Brass and Silver Workers.

At the regular meeting of Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass Moulders, Brass and Silver Workers' Union of North America, Local No. 292, speeches were made denouncing Eben S. Draper for his attitude toward labor, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we, the members of Local No. 292, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass Moulders, Brass and Silver Workers' Union of North America, assembled in Southbridge, indorse E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor, and

"Whereas, Eben S. Draper has shown hostility to organized labor and to the workingman in general, we most emphatically protest against his re-election. Defeat the enemy, Eben S. Draper, and elect the friend of labor, E. Gerry Brown."

ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOMS

Pianos at Prices Less Than Wholesale

Every week we receive dozens of Pianos from dealers whose names we cannot mention for business reasons, who want cash quickly, and they know they can get it by sending some Piano to our Sacrifice Storage Salesrooms. Our cut price tag is put on them, and they go for a song. We put them on the floor with the other Storage Salesroom Pianos. They are neither marked higher nor lower—they are sacrificed. Sometimes a Piano with an exquisite case, hand-carved with the skill of an artist, goes for a price that is really an insult to its artistic worth. Our Storage Salesroom sacrifice tag tells nothing of art—it tells only the cold fact that the Piano must be sold—sold quickly, and, of course, at a price that carries joy only to the buyer. If you want a Piano bargain, see what the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' sacrifice tag can do for you.

Several of Below Makes Left. Will Be Sold This Week at Reduced Prices.

Wellington, Chicago—Sommer, Omaha, Neb.—Whitney, Chicago—Smith & Barnes, Chicago—Rogers Bros., Chicago—Marshall & Wendell, New York—Kranich & Bach, New York—Kingsbury, Chicago—Woodbury, Leominster—Geo. Steck, New York—Jacob Bros., New York. People familiar with these names will know that they are excellent pianos in every respect. They are sold at a less price than New England makes only because Boston is not acquainted with their true worth. See these sure.

MONOPOLY LODGE WANTS THIS KIND OF GOVERNOR!—DO YOU?

Men Are Always Asking Questions of History

What Questions Will the Future Ask About You?

Readers, when you look back over the past, are you not constantly asking yourself, "HOW DID THEY EVER STAND SUCH THINGS? HOW IS IT POSSIBLE THAT THEY WERE DULL ENOUGH AND SERVILE ENOUGH NOT TO PROTEST!"

You wonder that those hundreds of thousands of miserable slaves should have toiled and died building the pyramids. You ask yourself: "Why didn't they turn and die at least in the effort to gain freedom?"

You wonder how a small handful of determined, fierce Spartans could hold that great mass of wretched slaves under foot. You cannot understand why there was such a lack of manhood in those helots. WHY they did not rebel.

So it is all through history, you are constantly asking yourself, "WHY DID THEY STAND IT?"

Reader, has it occurred to you to ask yourself, "What will the future ask about ME?"

Don't you think that future generations of Americans, looking back to this day, and seeing you poor creatures swindled by Trusts, literally, physically maltreated by traction Trusts, robbed by Gas Trusts, ROBBED OF YOUR VOTES, treated like cattle, will ask, "How in the name of Heaven did those people stand it? How COULD they have had so little manhood? Why did they not VOTE to free themselves from such conditions?"

Very soon YOU WILL HAVE A CHANCE TO VOTE AND TELL WHAT YOU THINK ABOUT TRUST GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED STATES?

The Trusts have arranged TO HAVE YOU GIVE THEM A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

Are you going to do it?

They have picked out their man, a "good fellow," and they say to you:

"VOTE FOR MR. GUILD AND SHOW THAT YOU TRUST US."

You KNOW this is so. You KNOW that the Trusts of Massachusetts and of the whole country MAKE NO SECRET OF THEIR DESIRE THAT YOU SHOULD GIVE YOUR VOTE TO GUILD AND TO TRUST GOVERNMENT.

You KNOW that the men who rob you through the Gas Trust want you to vote for Mr. Guild. Are you going to DO it.

You know that the men who pack you like animals into the street cars want you to vote for Guild. Are you going to DO it?

Those who believe that Republican government is a doubtful experiment WANT YOU TO VOTE FOR GUILD SO THAT REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT MAY CONTINUE TO BE REALLY TRUST GOVERNMENT. Are you going to DO it?

Some years from now the Americans in this country will look back to this stage of Trust development, Trust government and Trust oppression. They will see how it GRADUALLY grew, how the bosses named candidates to suit organized Trust money, how the organized Trust money taken from the people through their franchises was used to buy the people's representatives.

Looking back over this panorama the future will ask:

"HOW DID THE CITIZENS STAND IT, HOW COULD THERE BE SO LITTLE INTELLIGENCE, SO LITTLE MANLY SELF-ASSERTION AMONG THEM?"

In November you will have a chance to answer the question that will be asked. HOW ARE YOU GOING TO ANSWER IT?

Are you going to answer it by voting for an extension of Trust government?

E. Z. MARK RECEIVES A PACKAGE

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner

1. ROUGH LOOKING PARTY—EX-PRESS! De package called ninety-seven dollars and a half.
MR. E. Z.—WHAT? Say, you must think I'm one of those soft guys who can be bunoced by any one. Ninety-seven dollars and a half expressage! NOT MUCH!

2. ROUGH LOOKING PARTY—All right! Here it goes. De package is from Australia and is valued at Free Thousand dollars.
MR. E. Z.—Hold on! Some friend in Australia must have sent it and forgot to prepay. Leave the package. Here is your money.

3. MR. E. Z.—Mary, Mary; just see what some one has sent me from Australia—a present valued at three thousand dollars. Some article of virtu in native gold and diamonds, I suppose. It is very heavy. I am just about opening it.

4. MRS. MARK—Just as I thought! A box of common sand and gravel! And you paid ninety-seven dollars and a half on THAT. Oh, E. Z., this is the simplest ever! No wonder your doings are in the papers!

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Slam-the-Door

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner

THERE is a certain castle that is beautiful and fair,
And plants, and birds, and pretty things fill every room and hall,
But alas! for the unhappy folks who make their dwelling there,
A dreadful ogre haunts the house and tries to kill them all.
Some day I fear will find them dead and stretched out in their gore
The victims of this ogre grim, this wicked Slam-the-door.

HE'S a very tiny ogre, just about as tall as you!
He never carries hidden guns or plays with arms and knives,
And yet he almost splits the heads of people thro' and thro',
And I think him very dangerous to comfort and to lives,
And he often shakes the castle from the ceiling to the floor,
This awful, awful ogre known as little Slam-the-door.

HE gets up bright and early and he's oh, so wide awake!
And woe to all the sleepyheads and invalids who doze,
They dream the sky is caving in, that a vast earthquake
Has suddenly convulsed the earth and ended their repose,
As to and fro, and up and down, still noisier than before,
They hear the hurrying, flurrying feet of ogre Slam-the-door.

THOUGH the Princess of the castle has a headache, and is ill,
Though the Prince is in his study and wasn't quiet for an hour,
This wicked little ogre won't be quiet or keep still;
I almost think he sometimes knows he has them in his power.
Alas, alas for all the folks, their sorrows I deplore—
The folks shut in that castle with the ogre Slam-the-door.

A Little Novel of the Sunny South

By Wex Jones

NOT a leaf was stirring on the ocean. The vast blue surface, unbroken save for a small coral islet, stretched itself from horizon to horizon. A couple of young swordfish fenced languidly in the clear water.

A shark basked near the surface, lazily glancing over the latest comic supplement, and scowling angrily when the parrot-fish disturbed the silence with its piercing cry of "Polly wants a cracker."

A group of mermaids were eating jelly-fish in an open-water restaurant, and their frequent giggles distracted the young merman who was driving the seacows to the barn.

It was into this quiet scene that the Saucy Sal, a turbine sailing ship from Melbourne, forced her way.

Leaping to the shore, the Saucy Sal's skipper made his way toward the village of palm leaf huts.

"Alaaki oeki!" he cried.

"Talk phonetically," cried the chief of the village.

"Oogle google goog," said Captain Starcross.

"Ah! Bring on the beer!" said the chief. "You speak Kanookanaka like a native—of Boston."

"After you with that piece of ice, Cap," continued the chief. "The Trust has boosted prices again and one small chunk of the Chamberlain's skull.

Captain Starcross hardly heard the words; he was staring at the brown-skinned girl who was carrying the ice. "Has she a crook in her little toe of her left foot?" he cried.

"She has," said the chief.

"My long-lost daughter!" said the captain, kicking a native out of sheer joyfulness.

"She stubbed that toe on our cat when she was a kid—when Mary was a kid, I mean. It was the day before we were shipwrecked, and all hands lost, as I thought."

That evening the island was rejoicing. Captain Starcross had sent ashore a quick-offering of beads, mirrors, gin, barbed wire, peek-a-boo waists, silk hats and other delicacies.

"You worked that fine, Chief," said the Grand Chamberlain, as he carefully adjusted a pearl necklace around his waist.

"How did you know about the toe?"

"The Cap was asking if there was a stub-toed girl on Kakoola Island, and when I got the tip I hammered this one's toe to specifications."

"But what's she going to do in Melbourne?"

"Melbourne nothing. She's to swing ashore as soon as it gets dusk."

"And if a shark gets her?"

"Oh, she's only a girl."

And the chief idly bounced a cocoanut off
